

The girl and the youth were engaged to each other. They were this way when the village people took and decorated the girl. They tied her pots together and led her away by her finger tips. They put her up in the boy's parent's house. She sat there, saying not a word to her husband. She stayed like that a very long time and the people said to each other, "What should we do?" She must live with her husband." One day they went to their gardens. The people said quietly, "Let's leave them, let's go. Let them stay here, with her husband. It will get dark and they'll sleep together." This is what they said while they were there in quiet words. The people went back to the village. It got dark and then the couple went in (). They brought fire, he sat on one side and she sat on the other. They were staying that way. A bird flew above them and alighted on a branch. It made a big noise, "KUKUKUKUKUKukukukuku....." The woman became frightened and leaped over the fire. She grabbed her husband and carrying him down, fell over him. Just like that, being scared she went to her husband. From then together with her husband, they lived happily.